

Science Fiction

In the year A.D. 2155, people are required to improve their brains regularly. Those who do not are cast out into the wilderness. Many go hopelessly insane, and there's no help for them. Meanwhile, there is an ongoing war between people on the surface and the androids who live below the surface.

Androids are getting the upper hand though as it is easier to clone androids than people, although humans are cloned with the experienced brain of the one cloned, and they are educated and wise.

People are all given rank by studying the tiny chest video footage every year. High ranks can afford to travel throughout the solar system and have many other privileges. But clones are taking up nearly all the high ranking positions.

But two young lovers who rank high decide they want no part of it and are planning a deep space voyage to a "love planet..." What will this mean for them and the worlds they are leaving behind?

Madness and love in the year a.d., 2155

Tom BALL

Madness and love in the year a.d., 2155 Tom BALL

Bedside
Books