

THE LOVE GAME

RULES

The game consists of a set of hundreds of questions related to romance.

Each player answers one different question in turn. For each answer, the other players each judge the answer on a scale of 1-100. Therefore the players must be skilled story tellers or perhaps even good liars.

Players can play as many rounds as they like, usually they agree at the beginning of the game. The scorecards can be used for up to 20 rounds in a game. But players could of course play more if they wish.

The winner is the one with the highest total score after all rounds are completed.

The more players the better it is, but you could have fun just playing with 2 people.

In some cases the question will not apply to the respondent. For example the respondent could be married and the question is about singles. In such cases the respondent can talk about someone they have heard about. For purposes of the game “lovers” or “couples” refers to single OR married people.

Have fun. Enjoy the game!
